THE GAZETTE.

FRIDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 2, 1860.

N. P. WILLIS IN GRACE CHURCH N. Y. In one of his latest letters to the Home Journal, N. P. W., gossips in this wise: First, let me tell you of my falling once more in the hands of my old friend Thdispensable Brown (Beadle of Grace Church, and Grand Chamberlain of Uptown,) and of my narrow escape of insanity, in the listening to some music by his courteous introduction. With the "forty years in the wilderness" which baggage has to undergo before its deliverance, when put into the hands of "Studley's Express," I was detained over Sunday in New York, on my return from Boston; and hoping to be forgiven for attending divine service in my yesterday's shirt and stockings, I went to Grace Church in the afternoon. An excellent sermon from Dr. Taylor, and the music they have always at that beautiful place-ah, me!-such music as flies low over your fount of tears, like a swallow's wing over the breathless bosom of a lake, shedding the lifted drops, afterwards, with eldyings that reach the shore of your heart. You know what those tremulous cadences are, in the voice of Mrs. Bodestein, chief chorister at this church, and how expressi-bly emotional is her sweet singing, always. But Brown came to me as I found my way ont, after service. The best organist in our country was in the choir (Mr. Morgan), and if I would stay till the congregation were gone. I should hear a little of his skill upon the instrument. From the various pieces he offered to play for me I chose the simplest-the great thunder-anthem of melody and majesty, "God save the Queen"-and not without remembrance of the boy whose mother is thus gloriously prayed for! Answered as prayer seems to be-with a mother reigning as if taken into God's holy keeping-may his reign prove to be the inherited goodness of such a life, as beautifully promised in the commandment! The church was empty in a few minutes, all except two or three expectant listeners who lingered in the aisle; and the slow measure of the hymn was first murmured low, like the scarce articulate utterance of a prayer in solitude. With the dimness of the light upon the splendid architecture around, and with the absolute stillness of the atmosphere, this beginning was most impressively reverential. And then came the few notes of the air, played with massive solemnity and strength-like the chant of a whole army on their knees-impossible to hear without an awe that hushed the breath. And the variations commenced, progressing upward with the exquisite complexities of inspired composition-the original, simple air dominant throughout-and brain and heart, thus far, keeping pace with the anthem's stately tread. But, how describe the gathering together of all these wonders of sound, these miracles of surprise in harmony, and thundering them forth in one burst of hallelujah, with the whole power of the player and his instru-The hush of the deserted building, and the reverberating echoes from the arches of the vaulted roof probably added to the effect-but I began to feel that strange sense of uncertain foothold upon earth which comes with the overtask of reason and sympathy .--Borne to the limit-where mortal comprelieusion ceases and angels take up the hymn and still the instrument went on! I was losing the knowedge where I was, reeling in an ectasy of wonder, when the sublime hosanna was suddenly still-ceasing I scarce knew how. I had a vague sense of an apology to make, for I had jumped up and seized hold of the player's arm in my bewilderment-but with a moment or two looking down upon the stillness of the deserted aisle. I felt the calm of the place, and so, with large drops of sweat standing on my forehead, I recovered the knowledge of my whereabout. I had really been almost wrought up to frenzy with the skill and power of that wonderful music. - Home Journal.

GEN. JACKSON'S WIFE-HER LAST HOURS. -The new volume of Mr. Parton's "Life of Andrew Jackson" has the following account of the death of the General's wife:

On Monday evening, the evening before the twenty-third, her disease appeared to take a decided turn for the better; and she then so carnestly entreated the General to prepare for the fatigues of the morrow by laving a night of undisturbed sleep, that he consented, at last, to go into an adjoining room and lie down upon a sofa. The doctor was still in the house. Hannah and George were to sit up with their mistress. At nine &'clock the General bid her good-night, went into the next room, and took off his coat, preparatory to lying down. He had been gone about five minutes; Mrs. Jackson was then, for the first time, removed from her bed, that it might be arranged for the night. While sitting in a chair, supported in the arms of Hannah, she uttered a long, loud, inarticuby a raitling noise in the throat. Her head fell forward upon Hannah's shoulder. She never spoke nor breathed again.

more followed. It was long before he would believe her dead. He looked eagerly into her face, as if still expecting to see signs of returning has received as and source of the partonage of it still expecting to see signs of returning Travelling public, and having been lately repairlife. Her hands and feet grew cold. There could be no doubt then, and they prepared a table for laying her out. With a choking and convenience to be found at any other FIRST-voice, the General said :

"Spread four blankets upon it. If she does come to, she will lie so hard upon the Major Lewis, who had been immediately sent for, arrived just before daylight, and found him still there, nearly speechless and wholly inconsolable. He sat in the room nearly all the next day, the picture of despair. It was only with great difficulty that he was persuaded to take a little coffee.

"And this was the way," concluded Hannab, "that old mistus died; and we always say that when we lost her we lost a mistus and a mother too; and more a mother than a mistus. And we say the same of old master; for he was more a father to us than a master, and many's the time we've wished him back again, to help us out of our trou-
